EAST CHICAGO.

East Chicago to-day—A. D. 1889—is merely the swelling embryonic bud of a magnificent project whose unfolding and perfection will require many years, much labor and the expenditure of millions of money. Rome, the reflection of whose splendor filled the civilized world for centuries as with a brilliant light and whose glory has not entirely faded away, was not established in a day nor completed by a single generation.

For nearly or quite half a century men had been dreaming and planning the establishment of great industries to employ a teeming population on the tract of territory in a corner of which East Chicago is located. Eight thousand acres of woodland and prairie, marsh and lakelets and river, borders on the southern shore of Lake Michigan in the extreme northwest corner of the State of Indiana, so advantageously situated and so attractive to the vision that it has been long coveted for a possession by men of wealth and enterprise and speculative ambition.

Years ago when Chicago was thirty miles distant, long before she had become renowned as a great metropolis, before telegraph lines were established or the whistle of locomotives and clatter of passing trains had frightened away the wild deer that fed on its verdure and slumbered in its thickets, this particular tract of eight thousand acres was bought by a company of visiting Englishmen for one million dollars. They paid down one-third of the contract price and mortgaged their purchase to secure payment of the remainder. Then ensued a period of financial depression with a train of commercial discouragements, embarrassments and disasters. Interest accumulated against the debt, payments were not made, and long and tedious litigations followed. That which had looked beautiful and altogether desirable became a veritable Pandora of evils to all who were any way interested in it; except perhaps the lawyers employed as counsel, and even some of these complained of the law's vexatious delay when they came to enforce the collection of their fees. Finally judgments of courts and compromises between litigants together effected an adjustment of all disputes and the tract passed under the control of a syndicate.

In 1887 the Calumet Canal and Improvement Company and the Standard Steel and Iron Company became joint owners of the tract in question. At that time the scheme of improvement had developed three principal and distinct features, viz.:

- 1 To build a pier or breakwater of sufficient length out into the waters of Lake Michigan at Poplar Point, twelve miles east of South Chicago, and cut a canal of certain width and depth across from thence to the Grand Calumet river, three miles southward; the pier and canal to form a harbor of refuge and port of entry for all classes of lake craft. When this is done the right of way will be donated to the United States in order to share in congressional appropriations for the improvement of harbors, rivers and navigation.

- 2 To build works upon an immense scale for the extensive manufacture of iron and steel.

- 3 To construct a link of railway to connect with the belt-line system of Chicago.

Preliminary soundings were made in Lake Michigan for the proposed pier, and the route surveyed and established for ship canal and railroad. The Standard Steel & Iron Company was organized with capital stock of $5,000,000, received one thousand and sixty acres of the original territory, and was incorporated. It was composed of Jacob Forsyth, Caroline Forsyth, Marcus M. Towle, Alexander Green, J. T. Torrence and Jacob Young. In the fall of 1837 the town of East Chicago was laid out at the southwest corner of the one thousand and sixty acres owned by the Standard Steel & Iron Company, plats and maps were made of it and grading was done on some of the streets. Then the remaining seven thousand acres was mortgaged and bonded and some of the bonds were hypothecated. This was followed by the construction of the Calumet Terminal railway westward to the Illinois state line and its subsequent extension to Blue Island, Ill.; and now the road bed is being laid with a second line of tracks. Also dredging was begun on the proposed ship canal. Messrs. Towle and Young each owned $1,000,000 of stock in the Standard Steel & Iron Company. In February, 1888, the interests of these gentlemen were bought by Caroline Forsyth; soon afterwards work on the ship canal was suspended, the Calumet Canal & Improvement Company rested from its enterprises, and its partner, the Standard Iron & Steel Company engaged in the business of selling lots and locating manufacturing plants. Up to February, 1889, the sales of lots and other real property in East Chicago amounted to $165,000. Recently an actual transfer of eighty acres was made to a Brooklyn sugar company for $1,000 per acre.

June 14, 1888, ground was broken in the wilderness for the foundation walls of the Graver Tank Works, which was the pioneer industrial enterprise on the ground. Around this nucleus, dwellings, stores, offices and every other enterprise in the town have clustered. Sheet iron tanks, for shipping petroleum on railroads, are made in the Graver works, and 35 to 75 men are given employment.

Four steam saw-mills are engaged in manufacturing hardwood lumber from logs shipped in by rail from the central part of Indiana, a large proportion of which is black walnut. The lumber is sawed under contract for John H. Lesh & Co., of Goshen, Ind. These mills employ 35 to 50 men.

The C. A. Treat Car Wheel Works occupy a brick and iron building, 90x180 feet, with boilers, engines, melting pots and costly machinery for manufacturing car wheels. C. A. Treat is president and J. W. Treat secretary and treasurer of the firm. They employ 100 men and have capacity to turn out 200 finished car wheels daily.

National Forge & Iron Company. M. Swartz, president; Frank R. Felk, vice president and general manager; Seymour Swartz, secretary and treasurer. Incorporated with a capital stock of $250,000; have invested $150,000 in buildings and machinery. Occupy iron and brick buildings, covering 240x270 feet. Are supplied with a 500-horse-power engine with fly-wheel weighing thirty-five tons, six or seven forges at each of which is a steam generating boiler, shears, rolls, etc., etc. Manufacture merchant bar iron, car axles and general forging. Capacity 100 tons daily. Employ 400 men.

Chicago Horseshoe factory. Geo. W. Davis, president of Chicago Horseshoe company; Edward L. Lamb, general manager; Zenas Burns secretary and treasurer. Chicago office 535 Rookery building. Occupy buildings 70x200 feet and 70x90 feet. Claim to have secret process for manufacturing. Claim capacity of 27,000 perfect horseshoes per hour or 270,000 per day. Employ 100 men.

The Chicago Foundry company is supposed to be managed by the officers of the Chicago Horseshoe company. A large, three-story, circular building is enclosed and some machinery has been deposited. Nothing definite could be elicited from those of whom inquiry was made, relative to amount of capital invested, number of men to be employed, the character and quantity of manufactured products that would be issued.

P. R. Cross Press Manufacturing company. Palmer R. Cross, president; A. Bush, secretary; J. C. Pepin, superintendent and treasurer. Incorporated; capital stock $10,000. Manufactures Cross' combined cider, fruit, butter and cheese presses. Located corner 149th street and Forsyth avenue. Presses are covered by patents. The house also makes such articles as apple grinders, sorghum evaporators, etc.

Famous Manufacturing Company of Quincy, Ill. Capi-machinery. Main building 60x212 feet, two stories, stone and brick. Will give employment to 40 or 50 men.

In spring of 1889 it was voted to incorporate the village of East Chicago. The board of town officers elected May 6, 1889, were: M. E. K. Lehman, Redmund D. Walsh, John M. Brennell, trustees; Fred J. Fife, clerk; Wm. H. Penman, treasurer; Neil Patterson, marshal. Ninety-nine votes were polled. The board of trustees selected Mr. Walsh for president and employed Messrs, Knotts & Reading as attorneys. Subsequently Mr. Penman resigned and F. W. Clinton was appointed town treasurer.

About two miles of streets and cross-streets are graded, some macadamizing is in progress, a system of sewers is being extended in portions of town, and a mile or more plank sidewalks are laid.

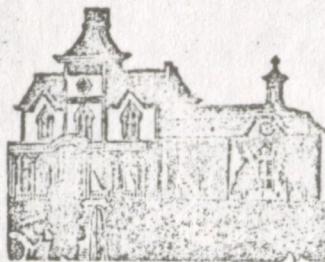

The Pennsylvania railway has a tasty passenger depot and ticket office; the Calumet Terminal railway has built an ornamental station house and telegraph office, also an engine house for locomotives. Something more than a mile of railroad side tracks reach out to accommodate the mills, factories and shops.

Tod's opera house is a substantial brick edifice of three stories, partitioned for stores and offices, covers one-fourth of a block, and would do credit to a city of 20,000 population. Half a dozen two story brick business houses are finished and in process of completion. Several fine two-story frame buildings for hotels, stores and other classes of business are occupied. Fifty to seventy-five frame cottages and two-story dwelling houses shelter families and boarders. A small one-story frame building is made to do service for the public schools. There is pressing demand for more cottages for the use of working men's families. Not much has been done yet for the cause of religion. No houses of worship are built. Rev. R. C. Wall, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal mission, East Chicago, diocese of Indiana, kindly furnishes the following summary of his labor:

"November 18th, 1888, I organized a Sunday school, preached the first sermon and gave the first service to the people of this young corporation. We have here a Sunday school, a ladies' guild—president, Mrs. Treat; secretary, Mrs. Halmer Senior; treasurer, Mrs. D. H. Molyneaux. Regular services every Sunday afternoon."

Divine services have been conducted, also, by the pastors of the Congregational and Methodist Episcopal churches at Hammond, at irregular times in such rooms as could be procured for the purpose.
